

Let's Get the Trains Back !

to Market Warsop, Edwinstowe and Ollerton

For some years Nottinghamshire County Council and local politicians have been arguing in support of reopening the railway which connects Ollerton, Edwinstowe and Market Warsop with the Robin Hood line at Shirebrook. Reopening of this line to passengers would allow trains to run between Nottingham and Ollerton via Mansfield and intermediate stations, taking less than an hour for the full journey and providing many new travel opportunities.

The idea is being supported by many local people and organisations, but so far the government has not agreed to provide the funding needed to start this new passenger rail service. However the Department for Transport is now looking at the possibility of including the new rail service to Ollerton in the next franchise for the East Midlands Trains operation.

Everyone who supports the idea of reopening the railway should write to the Department for Transport at this email address:
